

Investindustrial and QuattroR enter into a partnership agreement to support the growth plan of MTD

6th December, 2022 – An investment company of Investindustrial Group (“Investindustrial”) has signed an investment agreement with QuattroR SGR (“QuattroR”) to enter the shareholding of MTD - Medical Technology and Devices Group (“MTD” or the “Company”), an international group active in the design and production of medical devices for domestic and professional care.

The company was founded in 2018 when Investindustrial acquired HTL-Strefa to integrate it with Pikdare and thus create a leading company in the development and production of pungent medical devices for diabetes. In the last four years MTD has expanded its distribution platform, and its devices becoming a point of reference for globally.

Investindustrial and QuattroR will support the Company in expanding its product offering and strengthening its presence in Europe and in strategic markets such as the United States. The new financial resources, contributed by both partners, will be fully dedicated towards supporting MTD's ambitious growth plan in the coming years under the leadership of the new CEO, Charles Bouaziz, a manager with outstanding international experience in managing companies in the healthcare sector.

Together with QuattroR, Investindustrial intends to continue integrating ESG principles into MTD's strategy which includes an ongoing commitment to support hospitals, healthcare professionals and patients, especially those with chronic diseases such as diabetes. Paying attention to people and the development of increasingly sustainable products are and always will be central elements of MTD's ESG strategy.

Investindustrial was advised by EY, Chiomenti, Bär & Karrer, Wardynski. QuattroR was assisted by KPMG, Bain&Co, GPBL, Loyens&Loeff, Cleary Gottlieb and ERM.
